What is Time Speed Distance Rally?

A team consisting of a driver and a navigator follow written instructions to follow a defined route while maintaining a stated average speed. At undisclosed locations along the route, cars are timed and assigned penalty points for being early or late at a timing control.

What do I need to bring?

- A Partner
- A setable time piece with seconds (cell phone clocks are not recommended)
- A clipboard, pencils, pens, and highlighters are all helpful.
- A copy of the General Instructions (rules) available on-line at www.eescc.org Also available at the event start.
- A sense of adventure

What kind of vehicles are allowed?

Any street legal vehicle can enter the event. Rallies have seen a diverse assortment of vehicles entered including Sports Cars, Muscle Cars, Hot Hatchets, SUVs, Minivans, and even a motorcycle with sidecar.

Is this legal? Is this Street Racing?

A TSD rally is not a race. A TSD rally is a low-risk test of precision driving not an all-out speed contest. In addition to precision driving a rally tests the ability of the team to work together to navigate toward a successful finish.

What if I have more questions?
